STATE OF THE WORLD'S MIGRATORY SPECIES: INTERIM REPORT (2026)

UNEP/CMS/COP15/Doc.20.2

GENERAL COMMENTS ON THE DOCUMENT

The Meeting welcomed the progress made under this agenda item. SPREP highlighted a recent study on marine turtles in the Pacific, which showed that while some turtle populations are improving a recent extinction risk model showed that under a “status quo (do no more) scenario” with respect to levels of taking, several of these species are likely to become locally extinct. A link to the report was provided (Turtle-Extinction-Risk-Report.pdf), which could be referenced in the report. An additional comment from the UK referred to ensuring that the graphics included in the report used accessible colour palettes.
